Lucille Lauffer Becomes Bride of Vernon Hansen

At a quiet and simple wedding performed in the parsonage of St. John's Evangelical church in Mokena, Saturday afternoon at two o'clock September 7, Miss Lucille A. Lauffer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lauffer of Mokena, became the bride of Mr. Vernon Hansen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hansen of Frankfort. The Rev. Mr. Theo. Haefele officiated.

The bride wore a tea rose satin floor length gown with a bluish veil caught by a flower tiara. She carried an arm bouquet of tea roses.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Elmer Bormet, sister of the bride, wore blue taffeta with matching hat and an arm bouquet of tea roses.

Mr. Leroy Hansen of Joliet served his brother as best man.

Only members of the immediate families were present at the wedding service.

A wedding dinner and reception was served at 4:30 o'clock in the bride's parents home to thirty-five guests who were relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Hansen left the same evening by motor for a week's trip north. Upon their return they will make their home with the groom's parents in Frankfort.

Mrs. Hansen for the past two years has been a clerk in Sippel's Grocery store in Mokena.

Community Chorus

The Mokena Community Chorus is going to hold a meeting in order to organize for the winter, on Friday, Sept. 20 at 8 p.m. in the M. E. church.

After resting our vocal cords all summer we are anxious to sing again and seek and find enjoyment and relaxation in doing so under the direction of our very capable director, Mrs. C. Dystrup of Joliet.

We have 24 permanent members at present and more people have expressed their desire to join us, since they realize how thoroughly enjoyable and worthwhile the chorus is.

Our rehearsals always seem short because our director knows how to capture and retain our interest.

We are convinced that we will prove valuable to the community as a whole and in particular to the churches.

Because of the increase in membership our dues will be reduced and as we progress our pleasure will increase.

Please attend our meeting Friday Sept. 20 and join the group of happy voices.

They Would Like To Know

DEAR EDITOR:

Has this been an oversight of yours? If so it is only ethical that an acknowledgement be made of the amount of money which was so willingly and graciously donated to the Nelson fund last spring, and presumably turned over to Mr. Nelson.

The receipts of the Benefit dance were recognized. Why not recognize the money that had been given at such an early date?

If you will make mention of it in your paper as you did the benefit dance, we are sure it would please those donors who were not able to go to the dance.

(Signed)

SOME OF THE DONATORS

Mrs. Anton Benson, Geo. Heisner, A. Steen, C. Schoeneck, D. Young, Wm. Schuldt, M. Maue, A. Braun, W. Marti, Rose Schoeneck and June Schoeneck.

METHODIST

Mesdames F. Werner, E. Sippel, G. Dunn, N. Sorensen, Anderson, J. Egerton, J. Balaz, H. Neithammer, V. Haag, B. Hostert, L. Moriarty, E. L. Cooper, B. Neeham, Ethel Sorensen, Adeline Semmler.

ST. MARY'S CATHOLIC

Mesdames A. Sorensen, G. Rinke, E. Cooper, J. Cooper, N. Heiman.

Those exhibiting in the New Lenox-Frankfort 4-H Club:

Roy Ebert, Howard Eisenbrandt, Glenn and Jeanett Eisenbrandt, Nick Heiman, Fremont and Kenneth Warning, Howard and Norman Strassenburg, Wm. Abbe Jr., Chester and Lewis Ebert, Chas. Francis, Dorothea Eisenbrandt and Fred Francis Jr.

MOKENA GLAD-GIRLS 4-H CL.

Mary, Shirley and Betty Marti, Evelyn Schuldt, Eleanor Hostert and Shirley Nelson.

Card Party

St. Mary's parish will hold their first Card and Bunco party of the season, Thursday, Sept. 26 at 8:00 p.m.

Hot roast beef sandwiches will be served, so come and get 'em.

Over 3000 Attend Mokena Home-Coming

The third annual Mokena Home Coming was attended last week end by approximately 3,000 people who came from many surrounding towns and villages. Among those attending were the three sons and daughter of Mokena's well known doctor of the early days, Dr. Edmond Lynch. The sons are Robert of Ottawa, Robert of Moline and Henry of Iowa and Phoebe of Joliet.

Many other former residents were seen in the throng.

The weather was favorable, although quite cool at night.

The general exhibits tent housing many valuable exhibits in charge of Adolph Steen received a big play. Among the antique exhibits was a Latin Bible 334 years old.

The Ferris Wheel Received the Largest Play of the Rides on the Lot

The cooking school held in the Hatch Hall Saturday afternoon drew a full house. The ladies attending were much pleased with the school.

The programs were full of pep and were much appreciated. The climax came Sunday afternoon with a parade headed by the Mokena band, the color guard of the Mokena VFW and Ladies Auxiliary. The Indian motif was very appropriately carried out in the parade with little entire job for it was a real job.

Much credit also goes to Paul J. Roesener for the efficient manner in which he cleaned up and took care of the space allotted the Association in the Mokena bank building for their executive quarters.

The gross receipts ran over $870, but the net profit will not be determined until Monday night when the Association meets and a report is made on all expenses.

Plans are already in the making for next season's Home Coming.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lambrecht of Frankfort in Gay '90's Costume

Indian braves, papooses, etc. The spirit of the gay '90's was cleverly outlined by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lambrecht with their costumes of that period and their bicycle built for two which they rode.

Old Chief Moke sitting on his totem pole was also a center of attraction.

Wins 3 Straight

Bob Bormet allowing ten hits in 28 innings won the third straight victory for Mokena Sunday.

Mokena defeated the Homer Aces 2 to 1 in 10 innings. Previously Bob defeated Kohler 2 to 1 and New Lenox 10 to 1, allowing each of them only 3 hits.

More Ball Games

Although the baseball season is drawing to a close soon, there are still a number of good games to be played.

One will be Friday night, at Robinson's field between Peotone and the Robins.

The Robins play another game next Tuesday night also. Be sure to see these games.

TO HOLD PIE EATING CONTEST

A pie eating contest will be held next Wednesday evening in connection with the free movie at Mokena.

DEATH COMES TO MARY BARENZ OF MOKENA

Mrs. Mary Barenz nee Hendrichs a resident of Mokena since 1918, died in her home Wednesday, Sept. 18th at 4:30 a. m., following an illness dating from the past June.

She was born in Brandenburg, Germany, Oct. 23, 1868. She came to America in 1892 and stayed in Orland Township with her sister Mrs. Pauline Barenz.

June 18, 1893 she was married to Fred Barenz who died July 2, 1901.

On August 28, 1910 she was united in marriage with George Barenz.

Surviving are one son Phillip, 3 daughters, Miss Ann Barenz, Mrs. Mamie Holstein, Mrs. Phyllis Rinke, one son George died in infancy; two step sons, Jacob and Harry; seven grand children; one sister, Mrs. Pauline Barenz.

Funeral services will be held (today Friday) in the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena at 2 p. m. Rev. Theo. Haefele officiating. Interment will be made in the St. John cemetery south of Mokena.

New Lenox To Vote on Fire District

The voters of New Lenox township will be called upon to vote on a fire district proposition at a special township election to be held at New Lenox on October 8. The voters of the township will be asked to decide whether they want to have a fire district which would provide for a volunteer fire department to protect homes and farm buildings throughout the township.

The law permits a maximum levy of 25 cents per $100 to purchase equipment and operate the fire protection service.

At present New Lenox has no fire protection and in case of a fire a bucket brigade is formed and in most instances the fire results in a complete loss. Property owners will be reimbursed by savings in property losses and by lower insurance rates if they vote in favor of the proposed fire district.

New Lenox being unincorporated fire protection can only be secured thru the creation of a fire district.

Mokena PTA Meets Sept. 24

The first meeting of the Mokena PTA will be held next Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 7:45 p.m. at the school auditorium.

Following are the names of the officers for the coming year:

Pres., Mrs. Stokes Nebeker, vice-pres., Mrs. J. Eggerton, Secretary, Mrs. R. Gaddis, Treasurer, Mrs. A. Shoop, Program chairman, Mrs. B. Needham, Ways and means, Mrs. R. McGuire, Publicity, Mrs. L. R. Thiel.

We hope to see all the members of the past year and we are extending a hearty welcome to all parents whose children entered school this fall. Let us prove to our children, that we are interested in their work and progress at school by joining the PTA. There is no better way to become acquainted with the teachers and the parents of your community than by attending the meetings of the Parents and Teachers Association.

We strive to have worthwhile programs, which are educating, interesting and inspiring. You will always feel, that your evening was well spent at the PTA meeting.

Thomson Hybrid Field Days Coming

Our readers will be pleased to at the Thomson Top-Yield Seed Fields north of Frankfort on the Lincoln highway on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

(See Thompson ad elsewhere in this issue.)

Each season brings out new features in hybrid performance which have interest for growers. There is also the opportunity of viewing the breeding background of the hybrid they expect to grow next year.

He Is In The Army Now

We have just received a card from Fort Knox, Ky., from Bob Daily who was a former linotype operator in the News-Bulletin office and who will be remembered by a number of Mokena folk. He is a Private in Co. 6, Infantry, and says he is Uncle Sam's best soldier.

Has Grand Opening

Last week end James Ruffauff of Frankfort held the grand opening of his beautiful new tavern and restaurant at Lincoln highway and Cicero. This was formerly the rabbit farm. The new place has been quite well patronized. Drop in and see it.

3 Exchanges Get Modern Equipment

At 2:30 p. m. yesterday afternoon, Thursday, Sept. 19 the old time telephone exchanges in Mokena, Frankfort and New Lenox went out of existence when the new dial system was cut in. Now these three villages have the same type of improved service as Joliet has.

To report a fire in Frankfort dial 2121 in Mokena dial 2121. To call the police in Frankfort dial 2121 in Mokena dial 2341.

Emergency calls may also be made by dialing "O" Operator and asking for the Fire Department or Police. Hold the line and she will connect you with the proper party.

For assistance and in emergencies dial "O" operator and ask her to help you.

For calls between the Frankfort and Mokena exchanges dial "8" followed by the number as listed in the directory.

For calls between Mokena and New Lenox exchanges dial "7" followed by the number as listed in the directory.

For calls to Joliet and other out-of-town points, except as listed in the preceding paragraphs, dial "O" operator and give the call to her.

For information dial "O" operator and ask for "Information."

To report trouble dial "O" operator and ask for "Repair Service."

The operator referred to is in the Joliet exchange.

An instruction sheet has been given to each telephone subscriber and it is important that this sheet be kept handy, also the telephone directory as you can no longer call a party by name. You must know the number of the party you are calling before you can use the telephone, but if you are in doubt you can dial the operator and ask for information.

All telephone numbers in the 3 exchanges have been changed.

The new number of the News-Bulletin is 2792.

Organize Two Hygiene Classes

There was a very large class which gathered in the Frankfort Public school yesterday afternoon to enroll in the Red Cross Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick class.

Because of the large number who enrolled from Mokena, it was decided to have a class in Mokena, consequently that class will meet next Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock in the basement of the Semmler home. This is a twelve week course taught by Mrs. Luella Stephens, R.N.

If there are others in Mokena who want to join the class they should be present at the next Monday meeting.

The Frankfort class will meet as usual next Thursday afternoon at 1:30 in the home of Mrs. George Mitchell.

Intruder Knocked Out and Arrested

A Joliet man who had stolen a taxi cab Saturday night came out to New Lenox and attempted to start trouble at the tavern of James Sherwood. The latter knocked the intruder out and he was later arrested and locked up in the Will County jail in Joliet.

Civic Group to Meet

The Mokena Civic Association is to meet in the Immanuel Lutheran church parlors next Monday night at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Elizabeth Pieper Dies In Joliet

Mrs. Elizabeth Pieper, 58 Strong ave., Joliet, died in St. Joseph's hospital Sept. 19th after a 7 weeks illness. She is survived by her husband Fred, her mother, Mrs. Joseph Jarchow, a daughter Mrs. Albert Minger and a son Clarence and two grand children. One sister Mrs. Henry Pieper and a brother Walter Jarchow.

Funeral has not been definitely set but will probably be Sunday from the Wunderlich Funeral Home to St. Peter's Lutheran church in Joliet with burial in the Frankfort Cemetery.

Will Sell Hall

The old Frankfort Hall Co., Hall in Frankfort which has been a landmark of the community for many years, will be sold at public auction Saturday, October 5th at 2 p. m.

University of Pennsylvania Celebrating Two Hundredth Anniversary of Founding

By GEO. L. SIMPSON SR.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

TWO centuries of growth are being marked by the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia this month with a week of celebration from September 16 to 21.

The celebration includes symposia and professional conferences, cultural and scientific exhibits, laboratory and clinical demonstrations, and convocations for the conferring of honorary degrees. More than 500 colleges, universities and learned societies are represented at the celebration by official delegates.

Among the recipients of honorary degrees are President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Sir Lyman Poore Duff, chief justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, while the list of distinguished guests also includes 200 American and European scholars and leaders in various fields.

The symposia and conferences, which constitute the program of the Bicentennial conference being held as a part of the September week celebration, are being featured by lectures and papers in six general fields—the fine arts, humanities, medical sciences, natural sciences, religion, and the social sciences.

The offerings in the field of the humanities are designed to bring out the continuity of culture, while in the other fields the objective is to reveal the trends of modern thought and the advances of science.

Former President Herbert Clark Hoover, Henry A. Wallace, the Democratic nominee for vice president, Hu Shih, the Chinese ambassador, Dr. Frank Baldwin Jewett, president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories and president of the National Academy of Sciences; Dr. Elmer V. McCollum, co-discoverer of vitamin A, and Dr. Jacques Maritain, famous French author and philosopher, are a few of the many noted speakers on the program of the conference.

Many Graduates Return.

The symposia and conferences of the Bicentennial conference claims a major portion of attention during the first days of the Bicentennial week celebration. At the same time, the program has been so arranged as to provide an opportunity for all to attend the various other events scheduled for the same period as well as to view the special bicentennial exhibits, demonstrations and clinics, and to enjoy tours of the campus, according to Robert T. McCracken, chairman.

Hundreds of the university's graduates and former students are attending the opening of class reunions Wednesday and Thursday, while on the latter day Pennsylvania's undergraduates greet student delegates from colleges and universities throughout the country.

Ten thousand alumni and alumnae of Pennsylvania join in paying tribute to the university on Friday morning, September 20, at a bicentennial meeting in the dormitory quadrangle. In the afternoon there is another impressive meeting, including a convocation of university council in Convention hall.

Addresses Given.

The morning program in the quadrangle includes addresses by Dr.

Franklin field, mammoth stadium of the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, has been the scene of many historic football games. At right is pictured Robert T. McCracken, chairman of the bicentennial planning committee for the university's 200th anniversary, being celebrated this month.

Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, former United States Sen. George Wharton Pepper, an alumnus and trustee of the university, and Thomas I. Parkinson, president of the Equitable Life Assurance society of the United States, who is chairman of the National Alumni Bicentennial committee.

Presentation of the bicentennial fund; addresses by representatives of the student body; and selections by the university band and glee club feature the program. Ralph Morgan, president of the General Alumni society, is presiding.

President Roosevelt and Sir Lyman Poore Duff receive honorary degrees and deliver addresses at the convocation in Convention hall on Friday afternoon.

In addition, Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the Supreme Court of the United States, who is an alumnus of the University of Pennsylvania, is delivering an address, and the bicentennial poem is being presented by its author, Edward W. Mumford, secretary of the university.

Water Carnival Staged.

A bicentennial river pageant and water carnival is being staged Friday night on the Schuylkill river in Fairmount park. A fireworks display, crew races, and a parade of floats depicting various phases of the university's life make up the program. Many former university oarsmen are taking part.

The University of Pennsylvania traces its origin to a "charity school" for which a building was erected in Philadelphia in 1740. Nine years later, after the publication of Benjamin Franklin's "Proposals Relating to the Education of Youth in Pennsylvania," there was established an academy with which the charity school was combined.

Franklin served as the first president of the academy's trustees, and so successful was the undertaking that in 1753 a charter was obtained in the name of the "Academy and Charitable School in the Province of Pennsylvania."

Charter Granted in 1755.

In 1755 a "confirmatory charter" incorporating "The College, Academy and Charitable School" was granted by Thomas and Richard Penn, and the institution continued under that name until 1779, when the state legislative body changed the corporate title to "Trustees of the University of the State of Pennsylvania."

Later, the rights and properties were restored to the trustees of the college, with the university still continuing, and in 1791 an act was passed amalgamating the old college with the new university and providing that the name of the institution be "The University of Pennsylvania," the corporate title it now holds.

The buildings first used by the university were at Fourth and Arch streets in Philadelphia. During a period of 15 months in 1777 and 1778 these buildings were used by British troops and the college was closed. At another time the buildings were occupied by soldiers in the Continental army.

Washington Attended Exercises.

In 1778 congress met in the Old College hall, and members of the congress, George Washington, and others prominent in early history of the country, attended the public functions and commencement exercises.

The university itself contributed many men who played distinguished parts in the making of a new nation. In the Continental congress, for instance, were Allen, Mifflin, John and Lambert Cadwalader, Peters, Bingham, and Smith of Pennsylvania, Hopkinson, Neilson, and Sargeant of New Jersey, Paca, Seney, and Hindman of Maryland, Williamson and Hill of North Carolina, and others.

Signers of the Declaration of Independence included the following Pennsylvania men: Benjamin Franklin, Robert Morris, George Clymer, James Wilson, Benjamin Rush, Thomas McKean, John Penn, Francis Hopkinson, William Paca, and James Smith.

Many Distinguished Graduates.

In the War of the Revolution the university contributed many graduates who distinguished themselves, among them being Maj. Gen. Anthony Wayne, Brig. Gen. John Cadwalader, Maj. Gen. Thomas Mifflin, Dr. John Morgan, director general and physician in chief of the hospital of the American army, Maj. Gen. Philemon Dickinson, Maj. Gen. J. P. G. Muhlenberg, Richard Peters, first secretary of war, Benjamin Stoddert, first secretary of the navy, and Lieut. Col. Tench Tilghman, aide and secretary to Washington.

The university was also well represented among those who later sat in the Constitutional convention, the group of Pennsylvanians there including Benjamin Franklin, Robert Morris, James Wilson, Thomas Mifflin, George Clymer, Jared Ingersoll, John Dickinson, Thomas Fitzsimons and Hugh Williamson.

The university, of which Dr. Thomas S. Gates now is president, also has an outstanding record of leadership in the pursuit of new ventures in education.

First Medical School.

The first school of medicine in North America was founded at the university in 1765, and the first department of botany in this country had its origin there three years later. The first teaching hospital was established at the university in 1874.

The Wharton school of finance and commerce, established at Pennsylvania in 1881, was the first university school of business, and in 1896 the first psychological clinic in the world was established at the university.

In 1910 the first department of research medicine was started in connection with the university's school of medicine, and in 1916 the first comprehensive graduate school of medicine was established.

The University of Pennsylvania has occupied three sites in Philadelphia in the course of its history, at one time being housed in a mansion built for the President of the United States. The university moved to the west bank of the Schuylkill in 1872. It is this tract of 120 acres which contains most of the 190 units of the university community.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

CARTER FIELD

President Roosevelt's disregard of political maxims causes surprise... He unexpectedly blames Congress, not business, for lagging defense program.
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—One thing about this presidential campaign is that neither of the candidates follows all the old political laws and maxims.

This might be understood about Wendell Willkie. He is a rank amateur in politics. But F. D. R. is generally admitted to be one of the shrewdest politicians of the age, so when he violates rules which experience has taught the old masters were sound it is a cause for wonderment.

Most notable recent example was the attack of the President on Sen. Hiram W. Johnson of California, followed by the attack on Willkie by Harold L. Ickes in his "reply" to the Westerner's acceptance address.

The President, it will be recalled, told a gathering of newspaper men at the White House that Senator Johnson was no longer a Progressive. Ickes warned the country over the radio that one of the disasters which would accompany Willkie's election would be that Johnson would become chairman of the senate foreign relations committee.

INTENT OF ATTACK IMPORTANT

But the importance here is not whether Johnson is "no longer a Progressive," nor whether there is any chance of his becoming chairman of the senate foreign relations committee. It is the intent behind the attacks.

At the time the attacks were made, Johnson was a candidate in all three parties for the senatorial nomination—Democratic, Republican and Progressive. Information from every source available to this writer was that he was certain to win both the Democratic and Republican nominations. These predictions have proven true.

Yet with this information, which was certainly at the President's disposal, he chose to issue an attack calculated to make Hiram Johnson furious. And this despite the fact that in 1932 Johnson, although sitting as a Republican in the senate, spoke in favor of Roosevelt in California, and that in 1936 he did not turn a hand to oppose F. D. R.'s reelection.

At the time, also, nothing had been said or hinted by Johnson to show that he was particularly favorable to Willkie's candidacy.

It would seem to boil down to this, that Roosevelt is so bitter against Johnson because Johnson opposed him on the Supreme court and other issues that he didn't care a rap about the consequences, especially as he undoubtedly thinks he can carry California even with Johnson openly fighting him.

PRESIDENT'S 'BOMBHELL'

It is interesting to note that President Roosevelt's much predicted "bombshell" that most politicians had been expecting, calculated to stampede the country for Roosevelt as against Wendell Willkie—was not an attack on business in connection with the national defense contracts.

For a time it seemed, from bolts launched against "profit greedy" manufacturers by high-placed New Dealers, that this might be turned into the paramount issue.

On the contrary, however, he took the position that not only was the defense program going pretty well, but that business WAS co-operating! He put most of the blame for delay on the shoulders of congress.

There are a number of interesting angles to the explanation. One is that the President is actually more sensitive to criticism from what might be called the Southern Conservatives in congress, and to that of certain other Democrats who are not Southern and not conservative—as for example Sen. David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, and Sen. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana—than he is to criticism from the "enemy," to wit, the Republicans.

OPPOSITION NEVER FORGETS

Every time the President has run into real trouble with congress it has been a combination of most of the Republicans with this hostile group of Democrats. They beat him on Passamaquoddy and the Florida ship canal. They beat him on the Supreme court packing measure.

The President has not forgiven any of them. So when three senators, Walsh, Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, Democrats, and Arthur H. Vandenberg, Republican, joined in an attack on the defense program it was not out of character for the President to make a strong case to the newspapers that all three were just fundamentally wrong. The feeling against Willkie, curiously enough, is not nearly so strong as the President's feeling against the individual senators who from time to time have beaten his cherished schemes.

London Called World's Best Air Target

WASHINGTON.—Terse headlines of "London Bombed" are reminders that England's capital is in some ways the most difficult in the world to defend, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"Because London's clay soil forbids high skyscrapers, its growth has spread out laterally to cover 692 square miles, exceeding the combined areas of New York city, Chicago, and Philadelphia. Berlin is only half as vast a target, Paris less than a third as large.

"London's great lateral expansion means that a bomb dropped within a 15-mile radius of Charing Cross and the Towers of Parliament hits an urban population of 11,855 per square mile. For more than three miles around Westminster, the central core of London supports 37,580 people per square mile.

On the night of the housewarming Mrs. Austin called Elsie into her sitting room after dinner.

"Close the door, Elsie, I want to speak to you."

Obviously embarrassed, the woman came in hesitantly.

"Don't misunderstand, I'm not asking you to spy on Mr. Wild. But I was surprised when he called for you today. Tell me about it."

"He wanted me to move Miss Morrow's things," Elsie said with reluctance.

"Where to?"

Elsie gave the number of the apartment building to which Lynn had moved, and from which she had come.

Mrs. Austin did not write down the address until after Elsie had gone. Then she noted it carefully. She sent for her husband immediately and told him what she found out.

"I don't want to press things, Charles, but has Harlen made any report to you?" Mrs. Austin could not bring herself to mention the girl's name even to her husband.

"Yes, but he's turned up nothing. She seemed to be quite a nice girl. Up in Vermont she comes from decent middle-class people, a sister in Bangor, married, ordinary. Her father was a small-town lawyer, it seems."

Mrs. Austin turned impatiently. "Now, Ruth, he's doing the best he can."

"What about Florida? I tell you there's something funny about all that!"

"She worked for some woman down there by the name of Warren. She had a trailer."

Mrs. Austin moaned: "It's awful. Do you know what happened today?" and the frantic mother told him about Elsie's visit to Lynn's apartment at Wild's orders.

"They should be able to find out something. Here's her new address." She handed him the slip of paper.

But Harlen proved a disappointment. His operators could only report the times Wild came to see Lynn, the hours spent with her in complete devotion. But it got Mrs. Austin no place at all.

If Lynn and Wild did not go back to Austin Manor, they went about every place else. Lynn learned for the first time something about the New York theater. They saw everything worth while together.

Wild knew everybody, and he was proud of the sensation the new model's beauty made wherever she went. And they were invited to many parties. But they went to few. Lynn had to be in at a reasonable hour, for she was at Rene's studio at 8 every morning.

They were bound to get into the gossip columns. Wild was so well known and Lynn such a sensation as a model, that that was only natural. But the first time it happened, Lynn was shocked.

"That gorgeous blonde with Wild Austin at last night's shindig at the Morisco Theater is the model you see in this issue of the Dispatch."

"It looks like a three-alarm. They are at the hand-holding stage."

When Wild met her that night after work she was embarrassed. As for Wild, he was a little nervous about the matter, since it had not been mentioned at home. He knew quite well that his mother must have seen the item. The thing which worried him was her silence.

When he saw Lynn's face he realized how upset she was over the matter.

"Think nothing of it!" he said, giving her hand a squeeze. "What do you want to do tonight?"

Lynn and Wild had found innumerable interesting little restaurants around the city. They had their pet names for them. Tonight Lynn decided she wanted to go to a little French restaurant where they served the best file of sole Marguery in the city.

"Some day, Lynn, we'll have dinner in Paris at just such a little place," Wild promised. "Which brings me to something else." He leaned across the table. "When are you going to marry me?"

Not since that awful morning after Wild had come to her apartment had he asked her that question. There was fear in Lynn's eyes.

"What is it, darling?"

The girl was trembling, but she could not force herself to answer. She must tell him! But when she looked into his eyes she lost courage. If she were out of this restaurant, maybe she could manage.

Later, when they left the eating place, Lynn suggested going up to her apartment.

"I'm tired, Wild. We can build a fire."

Maybe then, she could tell him the truth about her and Rene.

Later in the quiet apartment with the fire burning, Lynn walked restlessly about, straightening a picture, picking up a magazine only to throw it down.

"Lynn, you didn't answer me."

"It is hard to."

"Why is it hard?"

"Your mother—"

"We can manage mother. Once she realizes you really love me, the battle's won."

Wild pulled her down into the chair with him. They embraced and their lips met in a kiss. "Listen, sweet. You don't understand my family. They've had a bad lesson with Chuck. It isn't that they don't like you. It is just that they don't trust anybody."

"I understand. I don't blame them."

"This business of Chuck's is going to blow high as a kite one of these days, so be prepared for a front-page scandal."

"It will be hard for your mother."

"So, you see why I want to get us out of the way?" Lynn's eyes were clouded.

"It's Rene, isn't it?"

"Yes."

Wild made an impatient gesture. "Lynn, you're annoying sometimes. I can't understand you and Rene! You owe him nothing! Oh, I know what you're going to say." Lynn's heart was full of sudden fear.

"He was kind to you, stuck to you. Well, you certainly nursed him along like a mother! Good Lord. Where'd he be without you? I know he has talent. But if he didn't have you to paint, where'd he be?"

"That's just it!"

"You can't model for him the rest of your life! It's ridiculous. You supported him, you cooked his meals and washed the dishes. It seems to me you've paid your debt of gratitude a thousand times!"

They embraced and their lips met in a kiss.

"He needs me."

"What about me?" He kissed Lynn, holding her close in his arms, until he felt her hot tears on his lips.

"Look at me, Lynn!" He held her away from him. "Is it because Rene is in love with you?"

"He isn't."

"Of course, he is. I've known it always."

"Oh, darling, you're so wrong! He clings to me, that's all." And Lynn honestly believed what she said.

Wild got up and put Lynn in the chair and paced about.

"Have I got to go to Rene to get permission to marry you?"

"Oh, no, no, don't do that, Wild!" She was frantic at the thought. He must not hear from Rene. She must stop that, somehow.

"Wild, let me handle this. I'll talk to Rene tomorrow."

"Is that a promise, sweet?"

"It's a promise."

CHAPTER XXI

When Lynn arrived at Rene's studio the next morning for work, she wore some of Wild's orchids. They were gorgeous yellow affairs, stunning on her black suit. For Lynn spent her whole day in a breathless attempt to please both Rene and Mme. Reanoud.

Rene frowned. He lit a cigarette and went over and slumped onto the sofa.

"I've been wanting to talk to you, Lynn. Sit over there where I can see your face."

Obediently, Lynn came down and sat in a chair across from him.

"When are you going to tell Wild?"

Lynn's hands were restless in her lap. "Oh, Rene, I don't know. I've tried. I tried last night. I can't, Rene! What am I going to do?" She got up and went over to the big studio windows.

"You're a fool, Lynn. Why didn't you tell him in the first place? I told you to."

"I . . . couldn't. Now it's too late. I know him. He'll never trust me again. You don't understand how he is . . ." She turned toward Rene.

"You're off the deep end about him aren't you?"

"Yes."

"Do you want me to tell him?"

"God, no! I've got to do it myself, somehow." She wrung her hands. "If it weren't all so incredible. How can I make him believe that story? He'll leave me. I know that." She came over to the artist and held out her hands. "What am I going to do?" Rene put his arm about her shoulders and tried to comfort her.

"I can't sleep for thinking about it. At first, Rene, I thought it didn't matter. I didn't take Wild seriously. It was just fun being with him and dancing about town. Too late to tell him."

"The quicker you get it over with, the better."

"Just give me a little time. I'll tell him this week."

Rene's face was expressionless as he looked at Lynn. "We better get back to work." Lynn went back to the model's stand.

As he painted, Lynn was left with her devastating thoughts. She remembered so clearly Wild's insistent voice as he told her: "Never lie to me."

If only she could get an annulment or something. He might never have to know. But it would be difficult. If she went away from town he'd need explanations. And now, with her name becoming well known, it would be fatal!

"All right!" Rene threw down his brushes and reached feverishly for a cigarette. His eyes were burning and he was exhausted. He'd been at this two hours. Without speaking to Lynn, he went over and threw himself, face down, on the sofa.

Lynn got up stiffly. The clock said it was noon. She rushed off to change back into her suit and hurry to Mme. Reanoud's. When she came back to the studio she saw the crushed orchids in a heap on the model's stand and she hunted for her purse and gloves. Rene seemed to be sleeping, so she let herself out without speaking to him.

When the door had closed Rene got up slowly, afraid to look at what he had left on the easel. But he finally did. He stood there a long time, contemplating the picture. Then he went to work again. As he painted, he exulted. It was good! Good! He worked as though fascinated. It was a simple picture, painted without pretensions, direct and strong.

It was a head and shoulders, a splash of yellow orchids against a black frock. But the striking thing about that portrait was that it was the photograph of a woman's soul. And such a troubled soul.

Rene, looking, felt it was almost indecent to strip anybody so cruelly.

The arresting gold-flecked brown eyes were wide open, their owner's thoughts were far away. All the struggle of the world seemed wrapped up in that bit of dark canvas.

Rene worked the better part of the afternoon. When the light began to fail, he turned the painting around toward the wall, and threw himself on the couch again. It was thus Marty found him when he came bounding in demanding a highball.

"How's the work? Is the Christmas stuff coming well? I got a damned wreath. You artists sure make tough demands." Marty turned on the light and went over to the canvas on the easel.

"Don't look at it!" Rene's voice was sharp. "It isn't done!" He jumped up from the couch.

"Are you, too, going temperamental on me?" Marty turned the picture around before Rene could stop him. There was a dead silence in the room.

Marty walked over and pulled an unshaded light off the table and brought it back to the picture. Then he set the lamp back and turned and looked at Rene. He could see the excitement burning in Rene's eyes, they bored into Marty.

"Is it as good as I think it is?"

"Yes," Marty shoved his hands in his pockets. "It's better. God, man. You can paint! It's a cruel picture."

"I suppose so, but most art is cruel to human beings. It's truthful."

"What will Lynn say when she sees it?"

"I don't know."

Marty shook his head: "When do you leave for Rome?" he said with a short laugh. "After seeing that, I can't keep you here. I know that."

Rene did not answer.

"What will Wild say when he sees that?" Rene shrugged his shoulders.

"He'll have to take his chances with the rest of us."

Then Marty mixed a stiff drink for Rene, and he seemed grateful for it. Rene, with his drink in his hand, went over and looked at the picture again.

Marty thought he looked rather ill and said so.

"You're killing me with work."

"Like today!" Marty retorted.

"You're burrowing yourself out. I'll bet you haven't eaten all day."

Rene seemed surprised: "I guess I haven't."

"Then, now is time to begin. Get cleaned up and come along with me. You need recreation, to say nothing of a hunk of steak."

The first question Wild asked Lynn that night when he met her was whether she had talked to Rene.

"Yes," Her eyes were shadowed.

"We'll talk about it later."

At the apartment, Wild turned to Lynn and put both hands on her shoulders.

"Look at me. Do you want to marry me?" He shook her gently.

"Yes."

He drew her into his arms. "Then what is it?"

"Come over here, Wild. Sit down there. I can't talk to you when you're kissing me!"

She had determined that tonight, she'd have it settled. No matter what might be the outcome. He leaned over and kissed the tip of her tilted nose.

Underweight Child Needs More Exercise

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

I HAVE spoken before of the number of recruits who were rejected for war service because the chest was too small.

Practically every one of these young fellows, on questioning, stated that they had never played games because their parents were afraid they would get hurt.

When parents see that their children are not as others, underweight, tall for their age, round or drooping shoulders, it is only natural that they are somewhat alarmed at the thought of games or vigorous exercise.

The result is that these youngsters do not get any exercise and properly directed exercise at this "growing" age is exactly what the body, including heart and lungs, greatly needs.

"There are children who show pallor, excessive growth, muscular weakness, bad posture—sitting and standing. There are rapid fatigue, palpitation of the heart, stitches in the side, stomach ache, headache, dizziness and fainting spells."

Dr. L. F. Meyer, in Oriental Journal of Internal Medicine, reports that the general test of circulation by exercise (10 deep bends of the knees) shows that this group reacts otherwise than completely healthy children. The pulse remains fast in one-third of the children for longer than five minutes after exercise.

The blood pressure differs from normal for it also remains high for more than five minutes. These two tests—heart beat and blood pressure—increased for longer than five minutes show insufficiency of circulation and inability to react properly from exercise.

Group Games Improve Circulation.

Dr. Meyer suggests that as these children are nearing puberty, the circulation may improve and be equal to the demands made upon it. However, the treatment recommended is:

"Invigoration of the body by gymnastics and sport, especially by breathing exercises."

The point then for parents is to have these slender, gangling, pale, overgrown children attend a gymnasium where exercise and group games are supervised. All group games not only strengthen the circulation by calling on the heart and lungs for more blood, but develop self-reliance in these delicate children.

Liver Extract Is Good for Pimples

IT WOULD now appear that another use for liver extract has been discovered which may mean much to the appearance and thus the happiness of many girls and boys and young men and women.

Until recently, acne—pimples—was considered a distressing ailment which often came with puberty and had to be endured for 10 or 15 years—the most important years in life from the appearance standpoint.

Some skin specialists were able to help many patients by prescribing a diet. Then X-ray treatment was found effective. Recently, the injection of pituitary extract has given splendid results, as has also the use of viosterol by mouth. Now comes liver extract.

Boiling Increases Efficiency.

Dr. W. Marshall, Appleton, Wis., in the Journal of Investigative Dermatology (skin diseases), reports his use of boiled liver extract in the treatment of 14 cases of acne in which he obtained satisfactory results. The injection of liver extract—six drops—is given so that a sufficient amount of the specific (or needed) vitamin may be had. When injectable liver extract is boiled for 30 minutes, its acne-improving factor seems to increase. "When this boiled extract is given to patients already taking liver extract regularly, their improvement appears more rapid."

This means then that to our present knowledge of the beneficial effects of X-rays, injection of pituitary extract and taking viosterol by mouth, is added the further knowledge that the use of liver extract boiled for 30 minutes and injected under the skin also cures many cases of acne.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—How many thyroid glands does one have? After the removal of the thyroid gland, is medicine substituted for the lost secretion? Is X-ray a successful way to treat a goiter?

A.—1. There is only one thyroid gland but it is in two sections.

2. If there is a great increase in weight after removal of thyroid gland, thyroid extract is given.

3. X-ray is an effective method of removing a goiter but takes a long time.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

THE VOICE OF WISDOM

LESSON TEXT—Proverbs 4:10-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.—Proverbs 4:23.

What to do and how to do it—these are the vital things which the book of Proverbs imparts. It deals with every condition of life, good and bad, in the revealing light of God's holiness and love. Good advice may have its value, but we also need to know how to put it into practice. Therein is wisdom distinguished from knowledge. A man may have an unbelievably great store of knowledge, and yet be a foolish man because he does not have the wisdom to use it.

Knowing that these notes are used by a great many boys and girls, as well as by their teachers, the writer would suggest an outline for next Sunday which can be remembered by everyone who has ever crossed a railroad track. What does the warning sign say? "Stop, Look, and Listen." Then what? If all is clear, go ahead. That is just what our lesson tells us. Stop, for someone has a message for you; look, at the two ways of life; listen, to the wise words of counsel. Then go straight ahead in the right way.

I. Stop (vv. 10-13).

Life moves on at a rapid pace. One of the devices of the devil to gain and keep his hold on us is to keep things moving so fast that we never stop to think, or to heed the counsel of others. The wise man has something of importance to say to the young man whom he calls his "son." Let us stop and give heed to his warning, for we are assured that it will mean for us a long and happy life (vv. 10, 12).

Nobody but a fool would hasten past such a "stop" signal, nor thrust aside this opportunity for life-giving instruction (v. 13). Here is something far more important than mathematics, literature, or economics. Here is life.

II. Look (vv. 14-19).

There are really only two ways of life—"the path of the just . . . that shineth more and more unto the perfect day" (v. 18), and "the way of the wicked," which is only darkness and stumbling (v. 19). There is no middle way. We cannot walk in both paths; it is "either-or." Young people should get hold of that fact, for in these days there is a constant attempt to blur the colors, making things neither black nor white, but gray; neither good nor bad, but just advisable or inadvisable.

The moral laws of God are not changed; right is still and will eternally be right, just as wrong is and always will be wrong. Wickedness is so wrong that it causes men to spend sleepless nights trying to entrap others (v. 16). But no one need go that way; just do not "enter" that path, "avoid it," and if by chance you have wandered into it, "turn from it" (v. 15). God will help you.

III. Listen (vv. 20-25).

Listening is important business, calling for real attention and application. Especially is that true as one listens to the truth of God. It should be received by an attentive ear (v. 20), kept before one's eyes, and pondered in the heart (v. 21). Such listening is sure to bring results, and we find them enumerated in verses 22 to 25.

Life is assured to those who heed the words of God's messenger; not just a bare existence, but a healthy life (v. 22). God's spiritual children are not (or at least should not be) invalids or weaklings.

Keeping the heart right (v. 23) keeps the whole life right, and the way to be sure that the heart is right is to fill it with God's word (v. 21). Then see how the whole life responds; the lips speak no forward (R. V. wayward) or perverse words, and the eyes look straight ahead along the shining path of the just.

Now that we have stopped to give attention to the Lord's word through His messenger, and looked carefully at the two ways of life, and listened to words of wisdom and guidance, what comes next? Do we stand idly by and commend ourselves for our wisdom, or do we sit down and take our ease? No. Being assured that the way is clear, we

IV. Go Ahead (vv. 26, 27).

God wants His people to move on to greater glory and usefulness. At the Red sea, God told Moses, "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward."

"Move forward! valiant men and strong. Ye who have prayed and labored long; The time has come for you to rise. For lo! the sun rolls up the skies."

Thoughtful, vigilant, lest he be led into a bypath on the right or left, turning his feet away from every evil path, the child of God goes forward, and as he goes the road becomes brighter and brighter with the glory of the presence of the Lord, shining more and more until that perfect day when he shall find himself at the end of his journey and at home forevermore in the Father's house.

One-Day Honeymoon

That a bride may reject the bridegroom after the first day of the honeymoon is one of the strange marriage customs of the Todas tribes of southern India. The groom becomes an object of derision and is forced to leave the village. Only the bride has this privilege; the groom cannot refuse to continue the marriage. The tribe live in the Nilgiri hills, in the state of Madras; their language is quite distinct from other Indian dialects, and they have a religion entirely their own. Only a few of the tribe are left, and buffaloes are their standard of wealth.

The former Sunday School board of the Tinley Methodist church has been superseded by The Board of Education around which all the activities of the church center in accordance with the new church discipline. The scope of the new board is much larger than was embraced in the old board. A meeting was held Monday night to nominate members for the board.

The former Ladies Aid which is also operating under a new title, out of their income of $1300 last year paid $600 to the church building fund, paid for a large memorial window in memory of the old Ladies Aid, contributed to orphanages and other benevolences, as well as buying equipment for the new church kitchen and still have a balance of $350 in the treasury.

The young folks are also quite active, now having three Epworth Leagues in which the members range of young people from the ages from 12 to 23 years. The total membership of the group is 50.

The new church furniture is being made to order. Charles Crist, a member of this church is now engaged in making by hand a communion table and communion rail. Solid walnut is being used. These two pieces of church equipment are to be dedicated to the memory of Ralph Andres. It is expected to hold church services in the new edifice before the formal dedication date of November 3rd.

The fire department was called out to the south subdivision Wednesday afternoon, but upon arrival discovered that smoke from a stove in a small house had caused a fire scare. No damage was done and the fire truck did not have to go in action.

A group of Tinley Park fishermen will leave Sept. 27th on a fishing trip to Canada. This will be the final fishing trip of this season.

The Ladies Aid of the Zion Lutheran church will sponsor a card and bunco party at the Tinley Park public school auditorium October 2nd.

The Bettenhausen Hardware store is being rushed with furnace jobs with the advent of cool weather.

The Tinley Park Garden Club is sponsoring a bunco and card party at the Tinley Park school auditorium this Friday night, Sept. 20. The public is cordially invited.

Fred Hinspeter who has been ill for sometime, was taken to the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island on Wednesday afternoon.

Wm. and Wilbert Funk, H. C. Vogt and John G. Poorman left the forepart of the week on a trip to the Black Hills and Colorado Springs.

Elmer Siemsen, local I. H. C. dealer exhibited a tractor and combine at the Mokena Home Coming last week.

Miss Emma S. Tate left Sunday morning on an extended trip thru British Columbia and the Pacific coast, making the trip by train.

The newly installed officers of the Tinley Park American Legion Post took over their new duties at the meeting of the post Tuesday night.

A large number of Tinley Park folks attended the Mokena Home Coming last week end and Sunday.

Willkie Program Promises Help For The Farmer

The solution of America's farm problem occupies a foremost place in the attack on the nation's economic difficulties, according to Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential nominee.

Even as the G. O. P. standard bearer goes out on the first leg of his election campaign, he has given notice, that the plight of the American farmer, bad since the early 1930's, will receive his most earnest consideration.

Right in our own neighborhood at Morris last Saturday, Willkie gave the clue to his own way of method of approach, in making the man who works the soil independent again, giving him a fair return for his labor and investment and presenting a hope for the farm family for the future.

Wendell Willkie

The American farmer, Willkie said, will see a new day when industry has absorbed the jobless, and the working man receives a fair day's wages for his efforts.

Only this can create an ample market for the products of the nation's agriculture, and only this ample market can bring a good return to the farmer.

Therefore, Willkie proposed, he will strive toward breaking down the barriers which have prevented reemployment of America's millions of jobless, with the goal of ending the log-jam which has depressed the farmer's markets.

In the meantime, the G. O. P. presidential candidate has already gone on record as pledged to continue the present financial aids to agriculture, not for all time, but "until such time as a more permanent and equitable method of relieving the farmer is found."

Willkie, in his program for agriculture, has been promised the support of the G. O. P. candidates for congress and the senate, and he has pleaded for their election, so he may have their aid in carrying through his program.

In Joliet, last Saturday, he asked for the election of C. Wayland Brooks to the U. S. Senate and Chauncey W. Reed to the House of Representatives.

Thru the entire program, in fact, Willkie said that Republican leadership must be given a chance to save America in this present world crisis. To this end, Willkie inferred, the election of Republican state administrators is vital and he asked voters to give him further support by working for the election of Dwight Green as governor of Illinois.

The American farmer is in sympathy with the candidacy of Willkie and the other Republican standard bearers.

Private polls have shown the agricultural communities supporting and favoring the G. O. P. candidates by margins of over two to one and observers freely predict the election of the entire slate.

Public sentiment is such, these observers say, that the voters will return all Republican candidates, from the county offices up to the presidency, because of their promise for efficient and economical government. The sentiment in the rural areas, they declare, is amply matched by the feeling of voters in business and industrial life.

"Ten Pin" Reports Open Season On New Lenox Bowlers

The opening of the bowling season proved again that most Mineralite throwers can talk a higher score than they can throw. Some of last year's averages were certainly trimmed down. Reminded me of a fisherman, he always talks bigger fish than he catches. Of course when you take 50 men from a community to bowl you are bound to have some good one and some bad.

Noticed that Luke Boynton will have to be taught the game. He thought he had to follow the ball down the alley. When he got up he found a foul called against him. Saw Red Werner trying to line up to his talk, without success. Bill Feurer's eyes must have been foggy, he thought the pins were in the gutter. Otto Bormet's boys were in difficulties too. They wound up in last place for the evening. Maybe the rollers you had were out of round Otto. Heard Mel Whitaker claim that the pins had glue on them. It didn't look like it the way Rol Cagwin spilled them. He took top honors for the night with 198 pins. Heard one of the boys rolled a 70 game but he won't talk. Wish Walsh was in there trying but there was glue on his pins too. George Koeller is going to ask for a handicap on the foul line. He had trouble keeping his size 12's where they belong. Art Wirth didn't have much to say. Oh well, he didn't have much to count either, so that made it even. Believe Amos should clip his players eyelashes so they can see better. What say Amos? Sheldon Hauck didn't know the game was over. He kept right on playing 'till after midnight. Those scores don't count Sheldon.

If anything else happened it was missed, but we'll give you the dope again next week. Watch for it.

REPORT FROM JOHN CLAY CO.

Excepting high-dressing steers and well-finished yearlings, which are seasonally scarce and selling on the highest basis of the year, demand of late for the rank and file of cattle, hogs and lambs has been weak, largely due to a let down in consumer demand. Live lamb values have not been disturbed much, however, light receipts acting as a prop under this branch of the trade.

Northwestern ranges now are freely shipping stocker and feeder steers to Chicago. These cattle run from fair to strictly choice quality, affording prospective finishers a wide assortment from which to pick. Best calves are selling up to $11, with outstanding kinds higher. Very good yearlings are available at $10 and $10.50, while plainer native and range stock may be had to $8 and $9. Few feeder lambs are arriving. The right kind of light weights is quoted at $9 and $9.15.

Notwithstanding late concessions, meat prices to the consumer are about on a parity with a year ago, but sharply higher than six months ago. Steer values, on the average, still show an elevation of $1.25 per cwt compared with the corresponding time in 1939, but hogs are down $1, with lambs showing a loss of 25c. On the other hand, prevailing feeder steer values are 43c per cwt higher than a year earlier, with feed er lambs generally 25c over last year.

Pork moved out of storage in August at a rapid pace, during which period consumer demand was good. The clearance that month was largest in seven years. The huge out-movement reduced pork holdings 28 per cent since August 1, yet stocks are 15 per cent in excess of September 1, 1939. Lard reserves also decreased, dropping 10 per cent in a month, but still are more than double a year earlier. Other meats also decreased during August.

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaugen

The Frankfort soft ball season ended on Wednesday Sept. 11 when they defeated the Mokena team two games out of a three game series. The games were played because both teams had the honor of first place in the league. To determine first and second place was the reason for the hot battles. A large enthusiastic crowd witnessed these games on the lighted field at Mokena.

The Cradle Roll Department and Beginners class of the St. Peter Evangelical and Ref. church had their annual get-together on Thursday, Sept. 12 in the social room of the church. Decorations were colored balloons hanging from lights and the tables were decorated with favors and flowers. A short program was enjoyed after which a two course supper was served. There were present two great grand mothers, seven grandmothers, 18 mothers and thirty members of the classes. The youngest member present was Allen Leroy Mager, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Mager and the oldest was Jean Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Bennett. Mrs. Fred Heuser and Mrs. Glenn Folkers were the hostesses.

Mr. and Mrs. Burnett Schram and Mrs. Bertha Nieland spent Sunday in DeKalb in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Dunn and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Scheer entertained Mrs. Clara Burkhardt and son and two daughters from Kankakee on Sunday, Sept. 15.

Christ Sangmeister, Miss Loretta Maas, Miss Margaret Sangmeister and Miss Irene Steinhagen attended the Wheatland Plowing Match Sept. 14. On their way to the match they had the opportunity to hear the Republican Presidential Candidate Wendell Willkie deliver his speech in Joliet.

Russell Hossbach, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hossbach of Joliet had the misfortune of breaking his leg and receiving body bruises while helping fill silo on the Henry Bettenhausen farm. Russell has been working for Ray Geuther for some time. A door used for a windbreak blew over striking the belt which in turn threw Russell to the ground injuring him. He is a patient in Silver Cross hospital.

Ronald Harnack, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harnack, had an operation for appendicitis in Silver Cross hospital on Sunday.

Many local people attending the annual Home Coming festivities in Mokena last week end enjoyed the event.

The Farm Bureau picnic held Sunday in the Frankfort Grove brought out many people. The Will County Farm Bureau ball team was defeated by the Kankakee County team 7 to 4. Other amusements were enjoyed, such as dancing with the noted Tom Owen's orchestra supplying the music.

Word has been received from St. Louis that Mr. George Knapp, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Knapp, was married recently. His bride is from St. Louis. George is a student in the ministry of Evangelical and Reformed Churches.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Homering and family of Mokena have moved into the Fred Marti home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Breymeyer are parents of a son born in their home on September 6.

Mrs. Herbert Lambrecht will entertain the Amite Sewing club in her home on Sept. 24.

Miss Marjorie Hasenjaeger is attending the comptometer school in Joliet. Miss Betty Volrath is taking a course in Metropolitan College. Mr. John Henry Weitendorf is a Junior College student.

The new directories for the telephone dial system have been sent out and service of the same went into effect on Thursday, September 19. All numbers in Frankfort, Mokena and New Lenox have been changed and are using the dial system.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Clark spent last week visiting their son and family in Danville, Ill.

The Ladies' Aid of St. Peter's Evang. and Ref. church will conduct their devotional and business meeting Thursday Sept. 26. The following members will serve a hot supper to the public: Mrs. Ferdinand Scheer, Mrs. Walter Minger, Mrs. Elmer Reichert, Mrs. Herman Schoop, Mrs. Conrad Sangmeister, Mrs. George Schroeder, Mrs. Joe Scott, Mrs. Homer Smith, Mrs. Arthur Reese, Mrs. A. H. Krusemark and Mrs. Lizzie Lembke.

St. Peter's church will hold their annual Rally Day program Sunday, Sept. 29. The theme is "More Abundant Life." Interesting ideas will be given by members of the Sunday School. Every department of the Sunday School will render their part to the exercises. German services will be held at the usual time followed by Sunday School session.

TIME again for shrill voices to sound in corridor and classroom. Bager, restless feet step hesitantly in familiar places. Tanned faces lift to attention...back to the three R's—"readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmetic."

Young eyes, accustomed to sunlight and outdoor seeing, now must concentrate on close work indoors. Eye tissues, nerves and muscles strain with lighting not one-hundredth of the amount found in the shade of a tree.

Keep faith with young eyes. If there are any defects in their vision, consult an eye specialist. September 26, 27, 28

THE SEED FIELD IS LOCATED ONE-HALF MILE WEST OF THE JUNCTION OF U. S. 30 (LINCOLN HIGHWAY) & U. S. 45

Even though most corn growers know that the pollinator has fifty per cent part in determining every element of hybrid seed performance, few give it the consideration they should. The seed field from which you get your seed and the breeding and crossing plots from which the seed fields are planted can only be viewed or studied in the growing season. After that farmers have to rely on sales statements or pictures, advertising or radio representations for the understanding on which they base their hybrid seed judgment. The seed field alone is the only place where farmers can check up the dependability as well as the suitability of their hybrid seed.

ORLAND PARK WOMAN'S CLUB ACTIVITIES

The Orland Park Woman's Club held its first meeting of this year on Sept. 12th in the Creer Hall with Mrs. Chas. Maddox, President presiding. After all business was transacted the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Roxie Brown, Program Chairman, who then turned it over to the Educational Chairman, Mrs. Louis Walston. The latter introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. S. J. Hand, 3rd District Chairman of Education. Her subject was "What Can Be Done In a Community Like Ours to Further the Education of Children." She also emphasized the importance of parents keeping in contact with the school and its teachers.

Mr. P. G. Rowland, principal of the Orland Park High School also was a guest speaker. He gave an outline of the work being done in the High School this year.

Guests were Mrs. Earl Reish, President of the PTA, Mrs. Harry Heiting and Mrs. Sherman Knox, also representing the PTA.

Cookies and tea were served by the hostesses Mesdames Roxie Brown, George Gee, Sr., and James Creer.

Orland Park School News

The stone walls of the new gym are going up quite rapidly and the steel roof supports will soon be placed in position. Excavation work is also in progress for the concrete footings of the circular stage.

Pine new cork topped tables have been obtained and are in use in the Home Arts Sewing Department. The physical education classes are getting under way this week with the program of required games for all high school students. The girls are playing soft ball, volleyball, dodge ball and team relays.

The boys are playing foot ball, base ball, and other group games and relays.

Participation in this program is required of all high school students by state law. The school board and the administration feel that great value accrues to the youngsters in this program and that in addition to the sheer fun of playing they also learn the importance of team work.

The village board held a special meeting Monday night at which claims against the village were allowed and ordered paid. The board also authorized the treasurer to pay over to the Fire Department $900 received from the sale of the old fire truck. This money is to be applied on payment of the new fire truck.

Mayor Wm. Kollman, Fire Chief John Helenhouse and family, Village Clerk Mrs. H. Adele Cooper and sons Merrill and Floyd were among the Orland people who attended the Mokena Home Coming the week end.

Sherman Knox, Sr., who has been laid up for several weeks with a sciatica attack, is somewhat improved, but is still unable to get about without the aid of a crutch.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Loebe attended the Mokena Home Coming last Friday. The Ladies Guild of the Orland Methodist church will meet in the church parlors for an all day session on Thursday, Sept. 26 beginning at 10 a. m. A pot luck dinner will be served at noon. The annual election of officers will be held at this meeting and plans for the coming bazaar will be discussed.

Methodist Bible Class

After a two months lapse during the heated summer months, the Adult Bible Class of the Orland Park Methodist church resumed its regular schedule of meetings Wednesday evening, Sept. 11th. Following the opening prayer by the Rev. Mr. Nye, President Laura Cooper read an article on the origin of several of the famous old hymns, which all joined in singing. The Scripture lesson "whatsoever the hand findeth to do, do it with thy might: for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest." (Eccles. 9:10) was read and discussed by Rev. Nye and the members.

At the business session it was voted to pledge the sum of $25 to the church budget. Plans were discussed for the annual "Punkin' Pie" social which will be held some time in October, the exact date to be announced later. Refreshments and the usual enjoyable social hour followed the business meeting.

The class plans on an active and useful year and all the old members are urged to get back in the harness at the next meeting, especially because the annual election of officers will be held at this meeting. A cordial invitation is also extended to all interested to attend these meetings.

SUNDAY NIGHT SUPPERS
(Recipes Below)

Have you ever juggled a cup of coffee in one hand, a salad plate in the other, and at the same time attempted to eat the appetizing food the hostess has served you? It is a feat that even the most experienced cannot often manage.

To save a guest the embarrassment of having his suit ruined by a cup of coffee tipping over, or salad dressing trickling over the side of the plate which is being precariously balanced on the knees, serve your supper on individual trays.

Simplicity is the keynote of the Sunday night supper. That is why the "meal-on-the-tray" has become so popular.

Plan your Sunday supper around one central dish. It may be a salad, a creamed dish served on toast, or even a casserole dish.

Here is a favorite supper menu for warm fall evenings which easily adapts itself to buffet style of serving, or a tray supper.

Cranberry Molded Salad
Cottage Cheese with Chives
Olives Relishes
Hot Rolls Potato Chips Butter
Coffee

As you glance through the menu you can see that nothing in the meal, with the exception of the hot rolls, requires last minute preparation in the kitchen.

The buffet should be as inviting as it is possible to make it. The cranberry molded salad with a mound of cottage cheese and chives in the center of the ring mold makes an especially attractive center piece for serving table. The rolls may be placed in a cunning bread basket, covered with a napkin to keep them hot. The serving table must also have the necessary silverware, dishes, napkins and trays on it. When the meal is ready, each guest helps himself, and delights in the informality of the occasion.

Instead of using the buffet style of serving, you may want to prepare the trays in the kitchen. Then with the aid of the members of the family, the trays are served to the guests.

The following menu is an excellent one to serve when fall evenings are a little nippy, and a warm dish is appealing.

Welsh Rabbit on Toast
Cole Slaw
Baked Apple

Coffee Tea
Molded Cranberry Salad.
(Serves 8)
1 package lemon flavored gelatin dessert
1½ cups boiling water
1 cup cranberry sauce
½ cup pineapple (diced)
½ cup nuts (chopped fine)

Pour boiling water over gelatin and stir until dissolved. Crush cranberry sauce with a fork and add to the gelatin mixture. Pour into a ring mold and let stand until partially set. Fold in pineapple and nuts. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Fill ring with chilled cottage cheese to which finely chopped chives have been added; or use any other salad mixture which may be desirable.

Stuffed Tomato Salad.
(Serves 5)
5 medium sized tomatoes
Dash celery, onion or garlic salt
1 cup canned kidney beans
2 tablespoons celery (chopped)
2 tablespoons green onion (minced)
2 tablespoons ripe olives (chopped fine)
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 hard cooked egg (grated)

Select firm, medium sized tomatoes and peel. Hollow out the interiors and sprinkle with celery, garlic or onion salt. Mix together the kidney beans, celery, onion, olives and mayonnaise, and stuff the tomatoes with this mixture. Chill, and serve on lettuce leaves. Garnish with hard cooked egg, which has been put through potato ricer or coarse strainer.

Eggs a la King.

(Serves 4-8)

6 eggs
¼ cup mushroom caps
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
½ cup cream
½ cup green peas (drained)
½ cup green pepper (chopped fine)
1 tablespoon pimiento (chopped fine)
1 tablespoon parsley (chopped fine)
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
Dash paprika
½ teaspoon lemon juice

Hard cook the eggs, peel and slice. Sauté the mushroom caps in the butter, over low heat, in the top part of double boiler (directly over flame). Add flour, and blend well, cooking over hot water. Add milk and cream, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and is smooth. Add peas, green pepper, pimiento, parsley and sliced eggs, and stir gently to avoid breaking the egg slices. Season with salt, pepper, paprika and lemon juice. Serve hot on buttered toast.

Cole Slaw.

(Serves 6-8)

1½ quarts cabbage (sliced finely)
1 cup green peppers (cut in thin slices)
¼ cup stuffed olives (sliced thin)
5 or 6 small green onions (cut fine)
Toss cabbage, pepper, olives and green onions lightly together. Serve cold with french dressing.

Devonshire Buns.

(Makes 2½ dozen small buns)

1 cup milk
2 cakes yeast
¼ cup butter (softened)
½ cup sugar
Dash of salt
¾ cups flour (sifted)

Heat milk to lukewarm. Add crumbled yeast and stir until dissolved. Add butter and sugar. Blend. Add salt. When liquid is cool, add flour and beat until smooth. Knead 4 minutes, or until satiny to the touch. Cut across each way with a knife, rub with fat and cover with a cloth. Let rise 1 hour, or until doubled in bulk. Form into small narrow rolls, about 3 inches long. Brush with melted fat and let rise 1 hour, or until doubled in bulk. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) for about 18 minutes.

When cold split and spread with raspberry jam and clotted cream. Replace tops and serve.

Hot Muffins.

(Makes 10 medium sized muffins)

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup shortening
1 egg (beaten)
¾ cup milk

Mix and sift together the flour, salt, baking powder and sugar. Cut in the shortening. Combine beaten egg and milk, and add to mixture. Mix lightly, blending only until the dry ingredients are moistened. Place in greased muffin pans and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) approximately 25 minutes.

Tomato French Dressing.

(Makes 2 cups)

½ can condensed tomato soup (¾ cup)
¾ cup vinegar
¾ cup oil
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon paprika

Place all of the ingredients in a mixing bowl and beat until blended. Store in refrigerator in a quart jar.

A BOY'S DOG

By FRANK PEARSON
(W. C. Chapman—WNU Service.)

THE Waltons were not idealists, and when, after six years of married life, they took themselves and Bobby, aged five, to the long hoped for country home, they were prepared for certain tribulations. They did not feel exasperated when the coal turned to cobblestones in the furnace and the kitchen chimney made smoked meat a part of every dinner. But they did hope to raise chickens.

"One pair of Plymouth Rocks will produce two hundred young at the end of a year," said Mary. "Now, allowing for 10 per cent failing to hatch, that means 32,600 at the end of the second, or, at fifty cents apiece, $16,300. Deduct $500 for food and fencing and—Bobby, don't you go near the pond!"

John didn't see it that way, but he did see a future in intelligent chicken raising. He preferred ducks, but with a roving little boy upon the premises the duckpond was not to be made attractive with feathered tenants. Bobby was abnormally inquisitive, and the pond kept his mother in constant "alarums and incursions," as Shakespeare puts it. So they planned to drain it, and meanwhile started on the chicken proposition, in the shape of a gigantic rooster and ten hens, thereby increasing the estimated profits.

The day after the purchase, however, there were one rooster and nine hens. The next day there were one rooster and eight hens, and a week later there were one forlorn and angry-looking rooster and two hens, which went about their domain with an apprehensive air.

"It's the pip," announced John, after studying them intently.

"But pip doesn't obliterate them, does it, John?" asked Mary. "Wouldn't there be something left to show?"

"Then it's thieves," said John exultantly. "Now I've got it. I'll get a gun."

Mary was afraid of guns and wanted to insure their lives instead. But John was scornful of this proposition. It was to a gun or a dog. A gun cost $15, and a dog, a good dog—not a thoroughbred, but just a good, square, honest dog, might be had for less. John couldn't make up his mind. Providently, as it seemed, it was made up for him. That evening an elderly darky appeared at the front door.

"Yo' don't want to buy a good houn', do you, boss?" he inquired, pulling at a length of string, from the far end of which a yelping sound was heard. The yelping became more audible, and after a few yards had been drawn in a yellowish parallelogram came into view.

"Lay down, Charlie," his master commanded. "Ah'll let yo' have this houn' for five dollars, boss," said the Negro. "He's a good watch dog an' yo' won't be troubled by no thieves when he's around."

The yellow parallelogram came forward and stuck his nose into the ends of John's trousers.

"Oh!" cried Bobby, and the next moment the two were rolling over and over in playful happiness, such as a dog and a boy can ever attain.

This clinched the bargain. "Now we can get some more chickens," said John, and the giant rooster was comforted by the presence of another half dozen hens.

"I see you've bought Jim," said their neighbor looking over the fence next morning. "Regular boy's dog, ain't he?"

"My dog is named Charlie," responded John with dignity.

"Suit yourself, neighbor," replied the other. "He was called Jim when I had him."

John was a little mystified, but the sterling qualities of Charlie quickly assured him of his wisdom in purchasing him. Did any stranger draw near the house, Charlie's fangs were bared and his growls gave evidence of danger to all predatory persons who dared to molest the sanctity of the Walton home. However, a week later, to Mary's consternation, when she approached the chicken pen the gigantic rooster stood gazing upon her in affronted dignity. And not a single hen was visible.

"John, they've stolen all my hens!" she cried, almost in tears. "What's the good of Charlie if he doesn't keep guard over the chicken house? I thought he was such a good dog, too."

The mystery was solved by the disagreeable neighbor. He came over the fence later in the day.

"Lost your hens, hain't you?" he asked of John, with friendly interest. "I'd had liked to warn you, only you seemed huffy about that dog."

"What do you mean?" asked John, quite humbly this time.

"Well," said the other, "Jim's been owned by quite a good many folks hereabouts. He's a chicken dog."

"A chicken dog!" exclaimed John Walton.

"Yes, sir. Old Moses trained him to steal chickens since he was a pup. He sells him round, and when Moses comes for his dinner Jim knows him and helps round 'em up. Then he goes back home. I guess Moses has sold Jim half a dozen times since I've been here."

"Do you mean to say that infernal dog has caught all my chickens?" cried John Walton. "I'll shoot him. Why hasn't anybody else killed him?"

The other chewed a straw reflectively. "O, well, he's just a boy's dog," he answered. "Besides, nobody raises chickens hereabouts."

"And Moses?"

"Ha, ha! You'd have to be smart to catch Moses. Why, all he does is just stand outside and whistle."

"You haven't got a gun, have you?" demanded John quietly.

"Well, yes," admitted the other. "But I wouldn't shoot old Jim, if I was you. He's a real boy's dog."

"What do you mean by that?" asked John.

A piercing scream from the bottom of the garden answered him. Mary came running from the house. "Bobby!" she gasped. They raced together toward the duck pond.

On the brink sat Bobby, very wet and very much terrified. Beside him, licking the boy's face and wagging his tail, sat Charlie, also wet. There was a rent in Bobby's pinafore, where Charlie's teeth had met to drag him from the water.

Mary Walton caught Bobby in her arms, and Charlie jumped gleefully beside her. In silence the four returned to where their neighbor stood.

Then John Walton stooped down and laid his hand caressingly on Charlie's head.

"Never mind that gun, neighbor," he said. "I guess I know what you mean now. By the way, do you know anybody who wants the gift of a rooster?"

"I guess old Moses might take him," answered the other, chewing his straw.

Ukelele Player

By LEETE STONE

(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

THE Simpsons were at breakfast; that is, Mr. and Mrs. Simpson were, but Betty was absent. Simpson Senior spoke with a rasp in his tone: "I suppose you realize that Betty didn't come in until two last night."

"Yes, Father," mildly, "but—"

"Out with that ukelele player again, I'll bet." The rasp sharpened.

"Now, Father, Jim Leeds is a nice, clean boy. It's no sin to play the ukelele."

At this juncture Betty Simpson entered, her pretty head tilted a trifle and her eyes dancing.

"Don't tell me I'm making conversation again, Dad."

"Betty, where were you last night?"

"Dad," with delicate jauntiness, "d'you know if you had a thousand dollars for every time you've asked me that question at breakfast you could make quite a killing?"

"You won't gain anything by being disrespectful, young lady. From now on, I'm going to take charge of your affairs, and the first thing I'm—"

"Why, Dad," Betty laughed her most engaging laugh, "you mustn't talk to me like that, you really mustn't."

Mr. Simpson's naturally high color took on a deeper hue and he spluttered. Lydia Simpson devoted herself calmly to her soft-boiled eggs. Betty assumed a dutiful expression.

"I'll talk to you just as I please and you'll listen. The first thing you'll do is to stop running around with this ukelele player."

"What's your grudge, Dad, against Jim? He's straight, has a good job in a good orchestra—and he loves me as if he meant it."

"Now, let's be sensible, daughter. Your mother and I have given you everything you've needed or wanted. Consider us! It's time you married. We want you to marry Cornelious Worthingham. I won't say he's particularly romantic but he's a sportsman and a gentleman, and very fond of you. You like him or you wouldn't have played around with him so much this last year. You see—"

"Oh, I see—" Betty responded meditatively.

Believing he saw signs of weakening, Simpson Senior continued:

"Now, here's my plan, Betty. A week from Saturday we'll have a party, invite everyone that counts and announce your engagement to Corny. He's always asking you to marry him, you say. Well, see that he asks you that night if not before—and accept him this time."

Mr. Simpson's mouth widened to the correct proportions of his best business smile. "You'll never regret taking Daddy's advice, my dear."

"I'll have to think it over, Dad."

Betty's dimples and eyes were positively frisky in their attempt to cloak a bursting elation.

Every few seconds she turned her head and looked down the wide hall to the base of the broad stairs. In the little silence that fell at the breakfast table, energetic footsteps were heard on the floor above.

"Mother—please tell Hilda to set another place."

Father and Mother both looked inquiringly at their thoroughly up-to-date daughter. Above the now descending tread, rose the soft twang of ukelele strains in that particular number, "Stormy Weather."

Mr. Simpson's horrified stare betokened apoplexy. Lydia Simpson smiled a knowing smile. Betty addressed Hilda, the maid, who stood at her side.

"Hilda, that's my husband, Mr. Leeds, coming down. We were married last night. Get him some orange juice and toast and coffee, please."

"Y-yes, yes—Madam."

AROUND the HOUSE

Items of Interest to the Housewife

Potatoes that are to be French fried should stand in cold water at least an hour before cooking.

Dogs having access to the house should be kept thoroughly clean and free from fleas. Serious damage may be done if fleas enter rugs or upholstered furniture.

One soon learns by handling pots when managing house plants that if pots are light the plants are dry; if heavy they may be left without water for a time.

If new tinware is rubbed with fresh lard and thoroughly heated in the oven before it is used, it will never rust, no matter how much it is put into water. For stained tinware borax produces the best results. If a tea pot or coffee pot is discolored on the inside, boil it in a strong solution of borax for a short time and all its brightness will return.

A teaspoon of salt and dessert-spoon of lemon juice answer the same purpose as "salts of Lemon" for removing iron mold from linen. It is not a poison and will not prove injurious to the linen.

When laundering curtains of voile, scrim or any material which has to be ironed, if they are folded so the selvege ends are together and ironed they will hang perfectly even and straight.

It is a good plan to disinfect sinks and other drains once each week.

Local Treasure Hunters Suffer Rude Awakening

Three times Rawlinson had dreamt that concealed somewhere in his flat was a quantity of valuable silver. The dream could no longer go unheeded.

That night he and Mrs. Rawlinson sought a hollow place in the walls. At last they hit upon it, and after some manipulation with chisel and hammer, dislodged several bricks. There, hidden on the other side, lay—the valuable silver. Just as they were gloating over their find, there came a furious ring, and their neighbor bounded in.

"What the deuce do you mean by breaking up my dining-room cupboard?" he gasped.

Mint and herbs should be washed in cold water, wrung dry in a cloth and chopped with a sharp knife. If carefully dried thus they will be crisp and, instead of clinging in a wet mass to the knife and board, will be quickly chopped to powder. The board also will not be stained green or require special attention to clean.

A rug sometimes becomes badly creased. To remedy this, turn it upside down and wet the crease with a moistened broom, until the rug is quite wet; stretch the rug tight and let it remain over night after fastening it with tacks which do not rust.

Helpful Economy.—Why not plan to have fresh and stewed fruits for dinner when the family is dining alone? If these are substituted for rich pastries and puddings, you will note an improvement in your digestion as well as your pocketbook.

Strange Facts

Sun, Moon Eclipses
Luminous Frog
Foreign Invasion

Although there are fewer lunar than solar eclipses, more people have observed the former, for an eclipse of the sun lasts only a few minutes and is visible from only a narrow path on the earth's surface. An eclipse of the moon is longer in duration and may be observed from more than half the world.

A certain species of frog, after a heavy meal of fireflies, may be seen in the dark by the light of these insects shining through the walls of its stomach.

Custom officers on the American-Canadian border insist upon cattle staying on their own side of the frontier, even when their owner's pasture lies in both countries. When cattle are suspected of having strayed into the "foreign" part of the farm, their tails are doused in a solution of washing soda. If they are Canadian animals, the tails, having been treated with a chemical, turn a bright red.—Collier's.

Note the benefits of delicious oranges

Government nutritionists say: Fully half our families get too few vitamins and minerals to enjoy the best of health! So make it your family rule to enjoy oranges every day.

Just peel and eat them for grand daily refreshment. Or keep a big pitcher full of fresh orangeade handy.

An 8-ounce glass of juice gives you all the vitamin C you normally need each day. Also adds vitamins A, B₁ and G, and the minerals calcium, phosphorus and iron.

This season the wonderfully juicy California oranges are plentiful in all sizes. Those stamped "Sunkist" on the skin are Best for Juice and Every use! Order them next time you buy groceries.

Just Three Pieces To Pinafore Apron

AS YOU see from the little diagram, this pinafore apron consists of merely three pieces, that practically put themselves together. What could be simpler and quicker to make? And 8755 is such a practical, satisfying household help, too. It protects the hole of your dress, top and skirt, and simply won't slip off the shoulders. If you're sick of sloppy-looking difficult-to-fasten aprons with cross-buttoning effects in the back, you'll welcome this slim trim, go-on-over-the-head design with cheers of joy, and make it up time and again.

Choose polka dot percale, flowered calico, checked gingham or plain chambray for this (you can finish it in a few hours) and trim with bright ricrac braid.

Pattern No. 8755 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 2 1/2 yards of 35-inch material. 8 yards braid or bias binding. Send order to:

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran regularly, and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.
